

Legal and regulatory technology: Are you ready for it?

Hardly a day goes by where there isn't an article declaring that lawyers are being (partially) replaced by some magical technology.

The level of hype is not surprising – investment in legal and regulatory technologies grew by 713% in 2018. So, how much attention should you be paying to legal technology? Will it really revolutionise how law firms and in-house legal teams function? Worse (or better) yet, will it be replacing lawyers? How can lawyers remain relevant? What is the future of lawyer jokes?
